The great barns of the medieval period were the first farm buildings to attract the attention of artists and antiquarians, from the 18th century. In the early 20th century this interest broadened out to studies of other iconic building types, such as Arthur Cooke's A Book of Dovecotes (1920), and their inclusion in the famous regional landscape studies published by Batsford (The Face of Britain). A milestone in the serious academic study of the subject was the publication of a regional study by J.E.C. Peters (1969), which was followed a year later by Nigel Harvey's inspirational general history of the subject (1970, 2nd edition 1984). Peters has usefully summarised his work in a booklet (1981, 2nd edition 2003) and studies examining farm buildings in their broader national and regional contexts have been taken forward by Brunskill (1982, revised 1987), Darley (1981), Lake (1989) and Wade Martins (1991). Individual studies have been publicised in the journal of The Historic Farm Buildings Group, founded in 1985. A major project by the Royal Commission for Historical Monuments in England, which targeted sample areas for recording, was published in 1997 (Barnwell & Giles 1997). There are a small number of county-wide studies, which are referenced in the Regional Character Statements.

Despite an increasing level of interest in historic farm buildings, some of the smaller, less impressive building types have not been subject to the level of study and research that buildings such as barns have received. Therefore there is a limited understanding of the regional variations that may be encountered. As a consequence, the National Overview texts provided in this document for farmstead and building types are sometimes longer than their regional summaries.

There are a number of sources that provide a good overview of agricultural history and the development of farm buildings including:

The Board of Agriculture General View of the County of..., published from 1795 to 1814 describe the state of agriculture in individual counties at the time. They often include a map of agricultural regions and a section of farm buildings. They are inevitably biased towards the large, publicity-conscious and 'improving' farmers and estates.

County Directories from the second half of the 19th century often include essays on different aspects of the county such as agriculture.

The British Association for the Advancement of Science published regional studies to coincide with the venues of their annual meetings in the 1950s and '60s. Many contain useful chapters on geology and agriculture.

The various volumes of The Agrarian History of England and Wales (Collins, Hallam, Thirsk, Miller, Mingay, Whetham) include essays by leading scholars.

James Caird (1852) English Agriculture in 1851–2 is a collection of county essays written for The Times.

Haggard R. (1902) Rural England describes English agriculture county by county.

Hall, A.D. (1913) A Pilgrimage of British Farming describes farming in various counties in 1913.

The Journal of the Royal Agricultural Society has prize and regional essays on farming and farm buildings, especially useful for the mid- and late 19th century.

The Victoria County Histories are of variable use. The more recent volumes contain chapters on agricultural history and buildings.

The Vernacular Architecture Group has produced, besides its journal, a comprehensive national and regional bibliography (see Hall, Michelmore and Pattison for reference).

Barnwell, P.S. & Giles, C (1997) English Farmsteads 1750–1914 contains a short general introduction, a general concluding chapter and regional studies from West Berkshire, South Lincolnshire, North Northumberland, East Cornwall and Central Cheshire.

Brunskill, R.W. (1982) Traditional Farm Buildings of Britain gives a very useful farming and building overview.

Darley, G. (1981) The National Trust Book of the Farm contains a general introduction followed by regional studies. The revised Pevsner's Buildings of England, published county by county, often have useful introductions on landscape regions and building types.

Many county archaeological and historical journals include relevant articles. National journals of particular interest include those of the following societies:

British Agricultural History Society

Historic Farm Buildings Group

Local Historian

Society for Medieval Archaeology

Society for Post-Medieval Archaeology
